Invest in a Future of Healthy Aging

Your Gift. Our Research. A Healthier Future for All.

For months now, our community has been coming together around a shared belief: that scientific discovery can transform how we experience aging.

Through the Invest in a Future of Healthy Aging campaign, supporters like you are helping the Stein Institute for Research on Aging at UC San Diego advance research that is redefining how we understand aging and how we care for older adults.

Because of this commitment, scientists are pushing boundaries, students are preparing to lead the future of aging science, and research is being translated into programs that improve lives in real and meaningful ways.

But the work isn't finished.

As our population ages and federal research funding remains limited, the need for philanthropic support has never been greater. Continued support ensures that promising discoveries don't stall, that emerging researchers have the training they need, and that evidence-based solutions reach the communities who need them most, locally and beyond.

Whether you're making your first gift, renewing your support, or sharing the campaign with others, your involvement matters. Every contribution strengthens the momentum behind healthier aging for all.
